Chapter 1: Access to evidence

Public participation gives residents a voice in the library.

A count of loans describes use. It does not measure every need. Comparing periods requires attention to transport, school terms and opening hours. Interviews can explain absence but cannot replace a representative count.

Chapter 2: Comparing explanations

Public participation gives residents a voice in the library.

A count of loans describes use. It does not measure every need. Comparing periods requires attention to transport, school terms and opening hours. Interviews can explain absence but cannot replace a representative count.
